

AN INVITATION FROM JOHN HEINRICY

SIGN-UP FOR HIS 2018 AUTOBAHN TOUR

GM engineer and championship winning race driver John Heinricy invites you to join him for his German Autobahn tour September 27th to October 7th 2018. John will serve as host and driving expert for your entire trip. He has driven hundreds of safe miles on the Autobahns and Germany's secondary highways. Germany has one of the lowest highway fatality rates in the world due to their exhaustive driver education training programs. This is an opportunity to experience the true performance potential of your Corvette.

John spent 38 years with General Motors and twelve of those years were with Corvette. He was responsible for developing the 1996 4th generation Gran Sport. In 1984 he earned his Competition Driving License and began racing GM products on weekends while holding down his day job at GM. He was one of the drivers who broke a 24 hour FIA speed record driving a ZR1 Corvette. They averaged 175.885 MPH for 24 hours breaking a 50 year old Mercedes record. John designed a three tiered driver certification program for GM engineers responsible for high speed vehicle testing. Engineers who achieved the top certification, were able to test GM products on the 12.35 mile (20 kilometer) Nürburgring circuit and on the German Autobahn. Heinricy set several records on this demanding 173 turn course driving Corvettes, Cadillacs and Cobalts. He has driven over 1,000 laps on this legendary circuit. John tested and evaluated the C5R Corvette and Cadillac CTS-V racecars for GM. He also drove the C5R in 1999 at the Daytona and Sebring endurance races. In 2006 Callaway Competition, located in Leingarten Germany, invited John to drive their Z06.R GT3 Corvette in the FIA GT3 Championship. John competed for the first time at Hockenheim (2nd), Spa Belgium (3rd) and Oschersleben (4th). Before he retired from GM in 2008 his last assignment was Director of High Performance Vehicle Operations. John sums up his career with GM when he said "where else could you find a career that lets you play with cars all day?"

After retiring John started Heinrocket Inc. and helps to develop high performance vehicles. He has won 6 National SCCA Championships in Corvettes as well as 13 National Championships driving GM products. In 2014 he was inducted into the National Corvette Museum Hall of Fame (NCM) and currently is on the Board of Directors for the NCM Motorsports Park. John routinely trains drivers in car control techniques at the NCM Motorsports Park and other tracks. John Heinricy is the perfect host to help maximize your Autobahn experience.
